

THE WIDOW'S LAMENT.

Mrs. Hendricks' Version of Her Husband's Death.

THE CATTLEMEN AND INDIANS.

A Lively Debate in St. Louis on a Resolution to Take the Heds from Their Reservations.

The Cowboys.

St. Louis, November 27.—The fourth day's session of the convention of the National Cattle and Horse Growers' Association, was opened with prayer by Rev. S. W. Marston, in which touching reference was made to the death of Vice-President Hendricks. Before proceeding to business, resolutions presented by King, of Utah, expressive of the deep sorrow felt by the association over the death of the Vice-President, were passed and a copy ordered forwarded to his widow by telegraph.

The committee on revision of the constitution, reported an amendment to the article on dues, fixing the admission fee at $10 for an individual and $30 for an association, and annual dues at $5 for individual and $15 for an association. A further amendment empowers the executive committee to determine the date of holding the next convention. Both amendments were adopted.

H. M. Taylor, of New Mexico, agent of the United States bureau of animal industry, read a paper entitled, "Practical measures for the protection of range cattle from contagious diseases." The paper urged most stringent quarantine measures against a State known to harbor infected cattle, and to generally increase the scope of the powers of the bureau of animal industry.

Messrs. Brislin of Idaho, Moore of Colorado, Thornton of New Mexico, Swan of Wyoming, and Prior of Texas, were appointed a committee to confer with representatives of the American Hide and Leather Association on the subject of branding cattle.

The special order, being the matter of recommending the appointment of a national pleuro-pneumonia commission, was taken up.

Glynnson, of New Mexico, yesterday offered as a substitute for the resolution requesting the President to appoint a commission of five practical breeders, a resolution leaving the matter in the hands of Congress without restriction, which provoked a spirited debate, during the course of which Dr. Solomon, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, defended his bureau with some severe replies to the gentlemen who had attacked him, especially Messrs. Washburne and Coy, of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange. Operated in harmony with the cattle men of the west, and with power greatly increased, he maintained that the bureau would soon remove all vestige of the dreaded pleuro-pneumonia, and keep it and other diseases from the herds west of the Allegheny mountains. The substitute was finally adopted without dissent.

The third resolution of the committee's report, requesting Congress to adopt measures providing for regulation by quarantine of the splenic or Spanish fever, was unanimously passed, amid great applause.

A paper by R. G. Head, of Colorado, favoring railroad shipment of cattle as the best, but in view of inadequate facilities and the uncertainty of shipment at certain seasons, urging the keeping open of the national trail, was adopted as part of the report of the committee on resolutions, to be forwarded to Congress.

The subject of branding was made the special order for to-morrow.

St. Louis, November 27.—In the convention of Cattle and Horse Growers, Harry Wm. Taylor, of New Mexico, introduced the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the National Cattle and Horse Growers' Association of the United States, that the true policy of the general government is to buy all of the reservations, now occupied by the roving and uncivilized Indians of the United States, and open up said lands to settlement; that each individual be granted 320 acres of land in the unoccupied section of Indian Territory, to be paid for out of the proceeds to be devoted to the support of Indians and educating their children; that as the Indians are the best armed people on the frontier, the law against the sale of firearms and munitions of war be more strictly enforced, and the penalty for its violation be largely increased; that in our judgment, the whole conduct of Indian affairs should be placed in the hands of the military department of the United States.

Messrs. of Wyoming, and Dameron, of Colorado, spoke strongly in favor of the resolution.

Maddox, of Texas, asked that the matter be referred to the committee on resolutions, owing to the absence of General Porter, the champion of the Indians. He believed in giving the Indian the right hand in everything.

King, of Utah, made a strong plea for the Indian, his speech being based upon broad philanthropic grounds.

President Hunter suggested that Mr. King had never been corrupted by Indians and seen the hair of his friends raised.

King replied that it was because too gentlemen with whom he had associated had always treated the Indians fairly and well.

Judge Carroll, of Texas, favored the resolution, but amended it to strike out the reference to the unoccupied portion of Indian Territory.

Callister, of Utah, opposed the resolution, on the ground that the Indian has rights which the white man is bound to respect.

H. M. Monday, of Texas, went into the details of Indian raids, attributing their forays mainly to the dishonesty of the Indian agents.

Stewart, of Montana, favored the amendment, holding that there is no sense in taking the Indians from the present reservations and locating them in Indian Territory. He spoke of the entire northwest, which is cursed by Indian reservations as large as the States. The Crow reservation was cited as 100 by 300 miles, inhabited by 1,000 ragamuffins, who do nothing but steal from their neighbors. If the gentleman from Texas will come up to the northwest he will hear the cry that the white man wants a fair shake. Upon behalf of the northwest the speaker demanded that the Indian be given his land in severalty and let him be dismounted and disarmed.

Maddox by this time had undergone a change of feeling and moved the adoption of the amended resolution, which motion prevailed unanimously. Adjourned till to-morrow.

At the Hendricks Residence.

INDIANAPOLIS, November 27.—At the Hendricks residence this afternoon and evening, a curious crowd continued about the entrance and the parlors were filled with callers. For the first time since her husband's death, Mrs. Hendricks came down stairs to dinner this evening and talked quietly and composedly with her relatives, having recovered somewhat from her prostration. This morning, she received a somewhat lengthy letter from Miss Cleveland, sister of the President, but on account of her personal character, declined to give it to the press. Just before dark, Bishop Knickerbocker, of the Episcopal Church, called, and with Mrs. Hendricks went into the darkened chamber, where the body of her husband was vaguely discernible, and prayed fervently and earnestly. To her friends she gave a loving account of her husband's last hours, what he was doing and what he said about ordinary affairs, there not being any apprehension on the part of either of the sudden fatal termination of his illness. When lying on the bed, only a few hours before his death, he read several papers and a few chapters in a book called "Lazarus of London," in which he appeared to be much interested, and discussed with her the book and the dispatches in the papers. He wanted to work, answering letters of persons, friends, but she urged that he should remain quiet, in accordance with the physician's instructions. She talked calmly of these things, but when she attempted to tell how, after leaving him cheerful and almost free from pain, for a few minutes, she returned to find him cold in death, she broke down completely and wept almost hysterically. Ladies were with her, so as to administer any comfort, but after a time she grew calm again and expressed her appreciation of the kindness of her friends and neighbors and the citizens generally, who relieved her of so much care and anxiety in matters pertaining to the funeral. To-night the house was closed and callers were excluded, the family of her brother, Mrs. W. Morgan and niece, remaining with her. As darkness came on, the curious crowd on the street, in front of the residence disappeared and nobody was left but the uniformed sentry, who paced solemnly up and down before the entrance. The Vice-President still remains in the front parlor chamber, up stairs, which is darkened and guarded.

Hendricks.

INDIANAPOLIS, November 27.—All the public buildings here are covered with emblems of mourning, and flags are displayed at half-mast all over the city, and citizens generally are doing everything that suggests itself to make the occasion of the death of Vice-President Hendricks appropriate and fitting. On account of the strain on the nerves of Mrs. Hendricks, visitors were excluded from the house last night; this morning the parlors were again filled by sympathizing friends. Mrs. Hendricks is almost prostrated from grief and exhaustion, and her physicians unless there is an emergency, R. A. Parks, sculptor, arrived from Chicago this morning, and assisted by H. Muller, of this city, and P. R. Griesner, of Cincinnati, took a plaster cast of Mr. Hendricks' face. It was not altogether satisfactory, however, and at Mrs. Hendricks' suggestion Mr. Parks will make another cast in the morning, from which he will model a bust. A force of men have been engaged in building a white marble vault in the ground on the Hendricks lot at Crown Hill cemetery and it will be finished to-night. There has been no change in the arrangements for the funeral, which will take place at noon on Tuesday, the body lying in state all day, Monday, at the court house. All rooms at the principal hotels have already been engaged by distinguished guests from abroad. The senatorial party and other representatives of government will arrive from Washington on Monday night. Senator Harrison, chairman of the reception committee, says he has received no authentic information on the subject, but is inclined to think President Cleveland will not be able to come. The pall bearers at the funeral were elected by the committee this morning, with Mrs. Hendricks' approval. They are: Governor Isaac P. Gray, Ex-Governor A. G. Porter, Hon. W. A. Woods, Judge of the United States Court, John L. McMaster, Mayor of Indianapolis; Aquilla Jones, David Macey and Judge Frederick Rand, all of this city.

Senor Moret is a free trader. The Cabinet, as a whole, is considered an excellent conciliatory ministry.

A WARNING.

The Indianapolis "Journal" is Fearful of Cleveland's Safety.

INDIANAPOLIS, November 27.—In connection with the announced intention of the President to attend the Hendricks obsequies on Tuesday next, the Journal of to-morrow will say: "While the citizens of Indianapolis and the State of Indiana would be both proud and pleased to meet the President of the United States, for whom a plurality of them cast their votes a year ago, with such honor and respect as the proprieties of the sad event of the funeral of the late Vice-President would permit, and while the friends and neighbors of Thomas A. Hendricks fully appreciate the honor that would be done his memory by the presence of the Chief Magistrate here on Tuesday next, the Journal feels constrained to say that it believes that Cleveland should not leave the White House at this juncture to make the journey. The dangers incident to the necessarily rapid movement of a special railway train should not be hazarded by the President, whose life and active services are now peculiarly valuable to the whole people. There are too many risks attending the trip, as he will necessarily make. As was remarked when the honored Vice-President was so suddenly taken away, it is unexpected that it happened, and against the unexpected, and we trust and believe improbable, it is Mr. Cleveland's imperative duty to take all proper precautions. The country has gone through, successfully, many perils during the last quarter of a century, but the line has on more than one occasion been drawn to its highest tension. There should not be a possibility of another strain, if human prudence can prevent it. Every honorable citizen of the country, regardless of party faith, pray for the life and health of the President, who stands alone now as the embodiment of constitutional power and authority, and from the moment he should leave the capitol until he reached it again in safety, the country would be in positive unrest and uneasiness. The Journal feels free to make this statement as a Republican newspaper, and published at the home of Mr. Hendricks, and as one against whom the charge cannot be made that it would do or say anything against the largest possible measure of honor to the distinguished dead. But Mr. Cleveland is not his own; he is not his party's; he cannot follow merely the dictates of his personal or political friendship. He is the nation's head; the only life between the government and an interregnum. In view of this, we would not have him take the risks incidental to the rapid transit which would mark his journey from the national capital to Indianapolis. Let all the Secretaries come who can be spared from their official duties; but the President should not leave Washington."
